

MANY CHURCHES DISCONTINUE SERVICES ON SUNDAY EVENINGS

Union Meetings in Cleveland Square Give Worshipers Opportunity to Hear Preachers From Various Denominations and to Attend Services in the Open Air During the Heated Period of the Summer.

EVENING services in many of the El Paso churches have been discontinued during the hot period and the union meetings in Cleveland square afford the congregations an opportunity to worship in the evening under the stars.

Morning services are unchanged as to hours in the churches. Sunday will see the pulpits filled with able preachers who announce many interesting subjects.

Details of worship in the various churches follow:

St. Clement's Episcopal. At St. Clement's Episcopal church, services on Sunday, the Feast of St. Peter and the second Sunday after Trinity, will be as follows: Holy Communion, 7:30 a. m. Church school, 9:30 a. m. Morning prayer and sermon, 11 a. m. The order of the 11 o'clock service follows:

Organ prelude: Pastoral in F sharp minor, Paulke.
Processional hymn, 445.
Verses in D, Croft.
Te Deum in D, Vories.
Benedictus in E, Stewart.
Hymn 144.
The Doxology.
Offertory, anthem: "The sun shall be no more thy light by day." Woodward.
National hymn.
Two-fold Amen.

St. Paul's Lutheran. At St. Paul's Lutheran church Sunday morning the preaching service will be followed by installation of the newly elected church council.

Austin Park Christian. At Austin Park Christian church at the morning service, the pastor, Rev. S. R. McCreary, will speak on "The Master Commands the Adoration of His Teachings."

The subject of the evening sermon will be "The Cup of the Scarlet Woman of Revelation a Menace to Civilization."

IF ONE Worships Anything On Earth More Than God, He Becomes Idolatrous

Worship of Images or Worship of Pleasure, Money, Power or Even Family Partake of the Nature of Idolatry.

By REV. HUBERT M. SMITH, Pastor of Asbury Methodist Church.

"Little children, keep yourselves from idols,"—1 John 5:21.
"Thou shalt have no other gods before me,"—Ex. 20:3.
"Covetousness, which is idolatry,"—Col. 3:5.

Nothing worshipped outside of the infinite, spiritual, eternal God may be included in the phrase "other gods," as found in the first commandment. Hence "other gods" is a term wider in the content of its meaning than the word "idol." This is apparent upon looking at the meaning and root idea in the word "idol."

The word "idol" is derived from the verb "idol," which means to see, and hence an idol, following the primary meaning of the word, is essentially something seen, something found in the tangible world of material things, as opposed to that other hemisphere of truth, the intangible world of spirit and mind, apart from all material things.

Love of the Visible. Hence, the essence of all idolatry is found in one's love for the visible, dependence for life, well being, and happiness upon the material, tangible world of matter, in one's esteem for earthly values, those that ordinarily have a monetary value, things appreciated by the five physical senses, cognizable by the world of science as well as by the ordinary, temporal, workaday world. No man on earth fails to appreciate the visible, tangible world. Its values are known and fully recognized by every man born into the world.

This high regard for the tangible assumes the state of worship, and becomes idolatry, when a man not only uses these things along with all of his fellow men, but esteems them as the summum bonum, the chief good, the chief source of his life, health, or happiness. To think tangible things looks exclusively for help, protection, sustenance, power and happiness.

In strict accord with this conception, the Egyptians worshipped the Nile in as much as through its life laden waters, overflowing upon appropriate occasion, they realized fruit.

Man Is Born Idolator. As a matter of fact every man born into the world is a born idolator. He is wrapped up, as he is, at the outset of life, in things strictly tangible, and pursues ardently and with the true devotion of a worshipper, and this for at least a brief period in life, various bubbles of fancy, such as the supreme good, the summum bonum of all life. All this is in case of children necessarily innocent and harmless. It is only when one fails to rise above these things, but pursues hobbles all his life that one incurs guilt, the guilt of violating the first commandment. A doll child, however beautiful among children, becomes contemptible if indulged in with the same zest by an old woman of 70. Not only so, but when God is shied off to a corner of one's existence, and other loves assume chief place, then ordinary loves deteriorate and coarsen and one's nature sinks in the scale of being and man gradually loses his otherwise high place. Thus nations become bestialized. An animal loves his young, and his own kind, as a life highest in life civilized.

Hence, "little children, keep yourselves from idols,"—1 John 5:21. God, who alone can lift one out of himself, and upward in the scale of being, that eventually one may rise to the supreme high task of the worship of the Great Creator.

PONY SIZE OF HAIR.
Pechin, Pa., June 25.—Robert Brown claims to own the smallest pony colt in the world. It is ten weeks old, a little larger than a Belgian hare and almost as spry. The colt is as affectionate as a puppy and likes to crawl up on its owner's lap whenever he is sitting.
